I was born in 1991 in Tehran, capital of Iran and graduated in B.A painting in 2014. I started my major professional activities after my graduation. I love portrait painting and nearly this project is my first serious artwork that received great acclaim in my country.

Statement

My primary inspiration for starting creating this series was my interest in perceiving the character and identity of people and the diversity of form and mimics of their faces.

transformed Faces which due to their inner conflicts and tensions lack expression and are as various as the number of people.

In the future works I intend to increase the number, size and the diversity of works in order to put more emphasis on the matter of identity and plurality.

However, what makes my works different than others may seem the use of a new technique in which dried up opaque pieces of colors are juxtaposed like a puzzle and come to life layer by layer as the personality of people and this materiality is interesting to the audience. Other prominent features are the variety and plurality in the number of the works which attracts the viewer's attention and makes them associate with each character.

In the process of creating this series I was inspired by painters like Henry Matisse, Andy Warhol and Lucian Freud.
